Many parts of the world are now suffering from the effects of the influenza epidemic, and it is a matter of anxiety to all who are interested in the health of the human race. The influenza epidemic is a disease which is characterized by a sudden onset of fever, headache, and aching in the muscles. It is also accompanied by a cough and a sore throat. The disease is highly contagious and can be spread by direct contact with an infected person or by the air. It is a disease which is most prevalent in the winter months and is a great source of trouble to all who are afflicted with it.
